4. Orlando Letelier, the new Chilean Ambassador to the US, was an economist with the Inter-American Bank. He [REDACTED] owes his important appointment entirely to his close personal friendship with Allende. There were objections on the part of some high ranking party members but Allende prevailed for his friend. This may be the first step towards making the Chilean Embassy in Washington into a classic communist style operation - with the Ambassador simply the figural head and with true control resting with the subordinate staff member [REDACTED]
